

LIGHTING FIXTURE MADE FROM COCONUT FIBER (COCONET): A SUSTAINABLE ALTERNATIVE

NiYugto Series

WHERE IT ALL STARTED

We take simple natural materials and turn them into extraordinary lighting pieces that honor Filipino craftsmanship and sustainability. Every piece is carefully handcrafted, combining traditional methods with modern design to produce lighting solutions that add warmth and personality to any environment.

Our purpose is to design lighting fixtures utilizing coconet while helping local craftsmen, specifically Teresa, Rizal, where coconet is locally sourced, boost their economic growth by introducing product addition and maintaining traditional methods of crafting that have been handed down through generations.

The NiYugto Lantern finds inspiration in the sky lanterns people let off at celebrations and festivals. We've turned the transient beauty of those into an enduring home light decor. Instead of bamboo sticks to form the same silhouette as those traditional sky lanterns, we've incorporated capiz shells in place of paper to generate a soft, warm light. Coconut fiber has been added to express our dedication to working with natural, sustainable material. The outcome is a light that introduces the wonder and happiness of sky lanterns into your life, producing stunning light effects that you can enjoy on a daily basis.

The light design takes inspiration from contemporary ring lights employed for photography and video production but reimagines this functional device in the form of a beautiful home accessory. Our design consists of concentric wooden circles that replicate the ideal circular light of ring lights, giving your room a harmonious, uniform glow. The suspended positioning of the rings provides the illusion of depth and motion, evoking the concept of infinity—thus the name. The LED strip lighting that is concealed in the structure creates the same warm, flattering light that is a favorite for ring lights, turning this fixture into both a design statement and functional lighting.

The goal of the design was not only to create light, but also to capture the feeling and atmosphere. Presenting the Niyugto Chandelier inspires a sense of true belonging and the need for vulnerability. The three tiers represent human connection. The lowest tier, closest to the light source, represents the initial warmth; the middle tier represents the stories and conversations we share; and the top tier represents the sense of belonging to something larger.

The NiYugto LumiNut draws inspiration directly from the humble coconut, a fruit that is closely associated with Filipino culture and geography. Our design replicates the rounded, organic form of a coconut, producing a clean yet dramatic globe pendant light. Through the use of recycled materials molded into this familiar sphere, we pay homage to the beauty of this ubiquitous tropical fruit. The woven design across the surface is reminiscent of coconut husk natural texture but allows light to seep through in a dappled, warm pattern. We called it "LumiNut" as a whimsical combination of "luminous" and "coconut," referring to how this common material becomes a source of light.

The NiYugto Barrel Cage pendant light is inspired by old wooden barrels which have been used for centuries to hold and age precious commodities. Our design reproduces the iconic curved slats and round form of such barrels, producing a lighting fixture that adds rustic beauty to any environment. The open cage design allows light to pass freely between the wooden slats, creating lovely shadow patterns on surrounding walls and ceilings. We called it "Barrel Cage" because the design really looks like a barrel that has been beautifully repurposed into a cage to shield light, blending recognizable farm and cellar looks with modern lighting requirements while respecting the Filipino tradition of upcycling materials.

The NiYugto Fan Frame Light also demonstrates our artistic process of upcycling old electric fan covers into beautiful lighting fixtures. We were inspired by the circular, cage-like design of vintage fan frames that could otherwise be dumped into landfills. By turning this common household item on its head and combining it with hanging capiz shells, we have produced a conversation piece of a pendant light with a story of re-invention to tell. Its original purpose as protection for the fan frame is now used to produce fascinating shadow effects, with the inclusion of capiz shells, which reflect light and cause subtle movement and soft tinkling effects similar to wind chimes. This style beautifully captures our conviction that there is beauty to be discovered in even the most mundane items when seen through new eyes, taking what once was merely functional and making it not just beautiful, but also significant to your living space.
